as the Result of the April Elections in This State.

by a Large Majority. Sam Jones Again

General McMaken.

April 2.—Fair weather in Ohio for the municipal elections. The unusual vote for April indicated more than usual in these local conventions. This was due to the fact that state ticket is to be elected next year, together with members of legislature, who will choose a successor to Senator Foraker. In some cities legislative nominations made by a popular vote. None any opposition to Foraker the Republicans, and there at enough action of this kind to any preference for John H. a, Tom L. Johnson or any one the Democrat favored for the realt.

Special interest was taken in contest at Columbus, where the licans for the past two years lost the mayor and all the other offices. As Governor Nash and Congressman Lantz reside at bus, both took great interest in contest there. Democratic administrations were in control at Cleveland and Springfield, where the Republicans made hard fights so as to the political machinery of as cities as possible at the state in November. Sam Jones

form the Democrats carried the

in the state as a whole. In the larger cities, Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo, the Democrats show which are offset by Republican state. At Columbus, where the licans have had the city government, the Democrats elect their by a close margin, while at and ex-Congressman Tom L. on (Dem.) was elected mayor by a 6,000 plurality. Golden Rule artisan Samuel M. Jones was elected for the third time at Toledo, mayor for the first time in eight

For justice of the peace Frank of 77. Republicans attribute their to a revolt against machine and the present city administration, and further assert that indicates a strong trend of publicism toward municipal ownership of public utilities.

A Shift at Dayton.
Dayton, O., April 2.—A heavy spring marked the election here, and result shows distinct Republican Police judge, clerk, prosecutor, inferior director and water-trustees shifted to the Republican side. Council stands as before, the fall campaign.

At Portsmouth.
Portsmouth, O., April 2.—The Republicans elected their entire city board. C. Milstead (Rep.) defeated Charles Glidden (Dem.), the mayor, by about 600. The Republicans got four out of seven councilmen. McKinley carried the city all by 890.

At Hamilton.
Hamilton, O., April 2.—Joseph Straton and C. M. Semler, Democrats, elected to the board of control 5 and 589 majority respectively.
Democratic loss of 600. The Republicans elected only John A. Schneider to the school board.

A Republican Sweep.
Ingatown, O., April 2.—The Republican ticket was elected

made a clean sweep. Vote was light.

At Akron.
Akron, O., April 2.—William B.
Dole (Rep.) elected mayor by 553 plurality over Charles H. Isbell. Democratic loss over last fall, 232.

Mayor Jones Re-Elected.
Toledo, April 2.—Samuel M. Jones (nonpartisan) was re-elected mayor by a plurality over McMaken (Rep.) of about 2,500.

Republican Gain.
Springfield, O., April 2.—Milligan (Rep.) was elected mayor by 41 votes.
A Republican gain over two years ago of 500.

RESULTS IN MICHIGAN.
Republican State Ticket Successful.
Local Returns.

Detroit, April 2.—Robert M. Montgomery of Grand Rapids (Rep.) has been re-elected justice of the supreme court by about 49,500 majority, and Frank W. Fletcher of Alpena and Henry W. Carey, Maciste, Republican candidates for regents of the state university, have also been elected by a majority almost as large. The vote cast was light, except in those cities where there was a light on some local issue. The Democrats made a marked gain in Jackson, where their entire city ticket was elected. The city went Republican last year. In Owosso, S.
D. Emery (Pro.) was elected mayor, overcoming a Republican majority last year of 650. He was the only member of that ticket, however, who was successful. In Detroit John B.
Whelan (Rep.) was re-elected police justice, the only municipal officer voted for, by 4,235 majority. Judge Montgomery carried Detroit by over 2,500. Of the 17 school inspectors elected, 11 were Republicans and 6 Democrats.

now organized and condemn in un-measurable terms the attempt of certain so-called Democratic leaders, to dispute and disorganize the Democratic party and we condemn the Republican party as being corrupt, unpatriotic and dangerous to our republic form of government.

2d. Resolved that we continue all county nominations of the party by the primary and Australian ballot system and that we reaffirm the resolution which has been in vogue in our country for a great number of years, requiring persons expecting to be candidates from our county in any district convention for any district office, to present their names to the Democratic voters of our country for indorsement to said convention or conventions.

And be it further resolved, that in case the district committee having authority to fix a time and place for holding any such convention shall fix a time for any such convention at too early a date for the voters of our country to express their choice for any candidate for such convention of conventions at our regular April primaries, as has been the custom in the past, then in such case, our County central committee shall immediately meet and prescribe rules and fix a time for holding such primary in our county before said April primary election. It shall immediately publish said rules, and give at least ten days notice or as much more time as the case will allow for holding said primary election.

3d. Resolved, that the delegates from Allen county to the Senatorial convention to be held at Defiance, May 22, 1901, be and they are hereby instructed to vote solidly for Hon. S.
D. Crites, for State Senator, until released by him.

M. G. BAILEY, Secy.
THOS. GRUBB, Chairman.

Delegates to State Convention.
Pending the completion of the work of the canvassing committee, it was moved that the rules be suspended and that the convention proceed to the election of delegates to the State Convention. The motion prevailed and the following gentlemen were selected:

U. M. Shappell, Thos. Grubb, Wm.
Klinger, M. V. Eaton, Peter Laughlin, John Herlihy, John Vent, J. B.
Severns, T. B. Bowersock, E. W.
Eusten, J. N. Creman, J. B. Sunderland, W. D. Loy.

Upon a motion by Wm. Klinger, it was decided that the Democrats from Allen county, not delegates in attendance at the State Convention be the alternates to said convention.
The report of the committee to canvass votes was read as follows:

S. D. Crites, 3313; J. B. Sunderland, 1860; J. W. Manges 2728, R. C. Eastman 1550; H. H. Roush, 652; J. A.

A. Bice, 3107; W. E. Grubb 3178, Geo.
Heffner 1691; J. W. Gensel 4640.

The chair then announced the following named gentlemen as the nominees of the convention:

For Representative—J. W. Manges.
For Sheriff—E. J. Barr.

vention was called and entertained the delegates with a brief speech, which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience.

This concluded the work of the convention, a motion to adjourn prevailed and the convention of 1901 passed into history as one of the most harmonious gatherings the Democracy has ever held.

Leo Tolstoi, the Celebrated Russian Author, is Driven from His Home.

Banished Because of an Attack Upon a Court Officer. The Assassin of the Minister of Public Instruction Sentenced for Twenty Years.

St. Petersburg, April 2.—It was reported several days ago, but generally discredited, that Count Leo Tolstoi had been banished from Russia because of the attempted assassination of the procurator of the holy synod, chief procurator of the holy synod, Karpovich declared that he was indifferent (who was shot at early in the morning of March 22, while sitting in his study), the attempt being attributed to a desire for revenge growing out of the excommunication of Count Tolstoi. Now it is learned from a trustworthy source in Vilna, capital of the government of that name, that Count Tolstoi was reported to have passed through Vilna, March 26, being escorted to the frontier by two gendarmes, Vlaseminski (who protested against the conduct of the police and Cos-assassin of M. Bogoloff, the Russian minister of public instruction, excluded from the imperial council, and who has been sentenced to 20 years' penal servitude, with a loss of civil rights, was strictly secret. Kar-povich spoke for an hour regarding abroad.

CAUGHT A DREADFUL COLD.

Marion Koche, manager for T. M. Thompson, a large importer of fine millinery at 1655 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, says: "During the late severe weather I caught a dreadful cold which kept me awake at night and made me unfit to attend my work during the day. One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by all druggists.

A Clever Idea.

A dainty evolution of the scent bottle is shown by the jeweler. It is a little ball of chased openwork gold, filled with a little sponge wet with a perfume which sends out a faint but constant aroma. It is a pretty idea, that may be attached to a locket chain or the muff chain for the day and to the fan during the evening.

HE KEPT HIS LEG.

Twelve years ago, J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. H. F. Vortkamp will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

One hundred and sixty miles an hour is the speed aimed at by a new electric railway company in Germany under the direct patronage of the emperor. Cars with accommodation for fifty persons each are now being built, and will be tried on a 30 kilometer track. It is intended to use electricity only for the express passenger service, as for freight and local traffic steam is expected to remain the power for a long time.

STUDYS IN OLD AGE.

GEORGIAN AGED 73 BEGINS COLLEGE CAREER.

Judge Logan E. Blackley Retires from the Bench and Takes Up the Study of Mathematics and Kindred Subjects—Enjoys His Studies.

(Athens, Ga., Letter.)

At the age of 73 years, Logan E. Blackley, chief justice of the Supreme court of Georgia, finds himself a student at the University of Georgia, a seeker after truth in the departments of mathematics and political economy. This is the first time Judge Blackley has ever dipped from the university spring of knowledge. Even at this advanced age he thoroughly enjoys it, and is convinced that it has already been of much benefit to him.

He has already passed through three terms in college, each term consisting of one whole day, and freshmen, sophomore and junior classes have been passed in the swift rush of the new student toward graduation. Unfortunately he had to return to his home in Clarksville this week, and thus his collegiate career was cut short before its full consummation. He is in no way daunted, however, and declares that he will come yet again and complete the studies of his senior course and become a full-fledged alumnus.

Since 1895, when he retired from the bench, Judge Blackley has been constantly engaged in study. He took up the question of values in order to solve to the satisfaction of his own mind the great money question then confronting the people of the nation. He says he started into the investigation with little knowledge upon the subject, and was a real seeker after truth as regarded that question in particular and all questions in general.

The study of the money question led him into the study of mathematics. The true conception of the money issue required a knowledge of ratio and proportion. These entered into every branch of his study and research and after trying in vain to solve his problem on values to the conclusion that he would be compelled to study mathematics whenever that science touched the question he had under consideration. Among the problems he was considering was one relating to the different roots and powers of numbers, which he called "The Reading of the Root."

He made known his difficulties to Chancellor Hill, whose summer home adjoins that of Judge Blackley at Clarksville, being separated only by a small fence.

Chancellor Hill told him that if the CHIEF JUSTICE BLACKLEY, mathematical faculty of the University of Georgia could be of any advantage to him in his researches the professors would no doubt be glad to assist him.

Acting under the invitation of Chancellor Hill, Judge Blackley made up his mind to attend the university.

A Lucky Clerk.

A solicitor's clerk at Rodez, France, who has twice drawn lucky numbers at Credit Foncier lotteries, in one case winning $240, and in another $4,000 has just had another piece of good fortune in securing the highest number among the conscripts leaving Rodez to serve under the colors this year. He will thus be relieved from serving in the marée, a service for which few Frenchmen have any enthusiasm.

Mexico Yielding Archeological Treasures.

Already generous in its contributions that relate to the Aztecs and cliff-dwellers, Mexico is now yielding up archeological treasures in the form of buried cities and palaces, some of which reveal an amount and quality of carving and constructive skill quite unexpected by the men of science who are employed in excavations.

GIVEN UP TO DIE WITH GROUP.

Mrs. P. L. Cordier of Mannington, Ky., writes:

"My three year old girl had a severe case of croup, the doctor said she could not live and I gave her up to die. I went to the store and got a bottle of Foley's Money and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life." H. F. Vortkamp, cor. Main and North streets.

A Child's Cry

Pierces the mother's heart like a sword. Often the mother who would do everything for the little one she loves, is utterly impotent to help and finds no help in physicians. That was the case with Mrs. Duncan, whose little one was almost blind with scrofula. But fortunately she was led to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and so cured the child without resorting to a painful operation.

and other diseases which are caused by an impure condition of the blood. It entirely eradicates the poisons which feed disease, and builds up the body with sound, healthy flesh.

"My little daughter became afflicted with scrofula, which affected her eyes, writes Mrs. Agnes L. Duncan, of Mansfield, Sebastian Co., Ark. 'She could not bear the light for over a year. We tried to cure her eyes, but nothing did any good. We had our home physician and he advised us to take her to a specialist, as her condition would have to be serious. As her mother was so sick, she thought she would never see her again. As she was so near death, I went to your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and your treatment on scrofula, getting the properties of medicines there advised. With five bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I have entirely cured my child."

"I hope this will be of some use to you and a blessing to other sufferers with similar troubles. I remain, a true friend."

DEATHS OF ENGLISH RULERS.

Since the Norman Conquest Violence Has Taken Many Away.

Of the monarchs who have reigned over England since the days of the Norman conquest nearly one-quarter of the number have met violent deaths. William I was killed by a fall from his horse; William II was shot while hunting; Richard I was killed by an accident or design; Richard II was killed by a crossbow while besieging the city of Calais; in France; Richard II was murdered in Pontefract castle; Edward II was murdered in Berkeley castle and Edward V in the Tower of London; Richard III was killed on the battlefield of Bosworth; Charles I had his head cut off in London.

Elizabeth's death was hastened by remorse that she had ordered the execution of Essex, and her sister Mary sickened and died soon after the loss of Calais, declaring that the name of the city would be found after death written on her heart. The death of Edward VI's son, the Black Prince, caused the aged monarch to die of grief. So, after the loss of his son in the White Ship, Henry I was never seen to smile again, and lived only a short time. Henry VI and George III were insane during the latter years of their reigns, and finally died from what in these days would be called paresis. Charles II, Henry VIII, Edward IV and George IV hastened their deaths by the dissipated and sensual lives they lived. Only two monarchs died of that great national scourge, consumption—they were Edward V and Henry VII. Queen Anne's death was due as much as anything else to overfeeding. Only two monarchs, Henry VI and George III, died after long illnesses.

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought. Bears the Signature of J. C. H. H. H. H.

A Popular Name.

Not counting the national capital, there are forty-four towns and cities bearing the name of Washington. No doubt more communities would have been thus honored the memory of the father of his country but for the prohibition of the postoffice department of more than one postoffice of the same name in a state. There is in nearly every state a county called Washington. But the most popular use of the name has come to light in the pension bureau. In certain parts of the country a rushing business is being done by attorneys in applications for pensions on behalf of colored soldiers who served during the civil war. The attention of the bureau has been called to one regiment in which, according to the rolls, twenty-eight colored George Washingtons served. A single company shows a membership of twelve George Washingtons by the applications filed.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.

Quick Relief From Pain.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks, of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago, I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs. Geo. F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by all druggists.

LESSONS IN MANNERS.

YOUNG WOMEN ACQUIRING THE SOCIAL POISE.

Retired Actress Has Opened Unique Classes to Which School Girls, Study Debutantes and Society Climbers flock with Eagerness.

(Special Letter.)

The retired actress believes that there are more ways of raising an income than by knocking about the provinces, playing one-night stands and running the chances of grip and smallpox. The retired actress used to be a popular, graciously mannered, gracefully gowned leading lady at a fashionable metropolitan theater, and though she never rose to tragic heights, she was enormously popular with the matinee girls fifteen years ago.

After some adverse experience the retired actress schemed out a scheme. In her day she had made friends with some powerful society women, and to them she explained that for a consideration she was willing to take private pupils and impart to them a precious distinction of manner.

Last autumn she began with ten pupils, today her clientele keeps her busy from 8 in the morning until 10 at night; her prices are $5 for a lesson half an hour long, and the charming drawing room of her apartment is at once her stage and schoolroom. School girls and debutantes, social climbers and settled matrons have all demanded her assistance in acquiring deportment; and one reason of the great faith and influence she inspires is her fine discretion in dealing with every pupil.

Many of the women who come to her prefer to keep their identity a secret from the others whose names may be on her books, and in consequence her pupils are instructed separately.

The Curriculum.

Her system is to teach entirely through actual demonstration, giving the pupil a part to learn and then act it out with her. She possesses a full library of light society comedies that present nearly all the situations of modern fashionable life, and scenes from these are studied and then rehearsed. Under the most careful criticism, direction and encouragement, the pupil is drilled, even to the motions of her body, the inflections of her voice and her facial expression.

Sometimes the whole scene will be acted out before a long mirror, and a harsh laugh, an awkward gesture or a false pronunciation is commented upon and corrected. Often enough the drawing stage is arranged with a dinner table or an afternoon tea corner and instruction to fit the occasion is the accompaniment. With school girls the actress prompts, directs and corrects.

TEACHING PUPILS TO WRITE NOTES.

With a book of etiquette at hand; teaching her pupil how to write notes, send or leave her cards, offer regrets, congratulations, and condolences, and enter a ballroom and accept or refuse a dance.

On the strength of her unique position this social trainer enjoys peculiarly confidential relations with her pupils. Women confess to shyness, their lack of capacity for commanding attention or interest; to her they frankly admit their sense of social failure, and in turn she freely points out the most glaring defects and suggests a remedy. Dress, voice, bearing, all come under her inspection and analysis, and as she candidly admits herself, no woman is a hopeless subject for reformation.

The American Woman's Wit.

"The American woman's quick wits will carry her over the most tremendous difficulties," admitted the actress, "and then most of them are tremendously ambitious to boot. The other day I had an illustration of this. The wife of a man who had struck oil, so to speak, came in to take a course of lessons. She was young, pretty, wholly uncultivated, but daintily ambitious, and determined to spend some of her husband's fortune in storming the citadel of smart New York society."

"She had no time to waste in learning by experience, so we started right in, and I gave her the scene of an afternoon call to learn, and told her to come dressed for the part. She came and acquitted herself with positive charm, but her pride in the achievement was dashed when I went forward and detached from her pretty person no less than ten superb diamond ornaments. One was a huge ray-shaped thing pinned to the breast of her sequined coat, and which she proudly mentioned as a 'cloud-burst'; then, item by item, I went over her costume, and suggested changes, all of which she took in perfectly good part, and now I am sure you could hardly tell on meeting her that she had not all her life been a member of the highest society. You may say that her discreet dress, her little notions, and manners are nothing but tricks, acquired by precept and application; just as a clever peacock learns to jump through a hoop and play dead into the circle she falls would enter, and by dint of steady practice they will become second nature with her, and place her at once where self-tuition would not carry her in ten years."

"It's just the same case with the hobbledey girls I have been training. Debutantes are turned into society every year absolutely unprepared for the difficult task of making themselves prized and popular, and that is just where my work comes in. I never saw the woman yet out of whom I could not cast the map of shyness by the simple means of acting and reacting against the roles of guest and hostess with her. I prevent years of discomfort and disappointment by showing a girl how to suppress a silly laugh, or bring out the cheerful mirth of a too sober miss. To a timid pupil I reveal the art of starting a conversation, and to one who has no powers of talk within her reach I teach the habit of artful, inspiring attention."

Evidently though the actress finds her profession exacting, it is, she affirms, never dull; and, for a clever woman, retired from the stage it is one of the most lucrative that has ever been tried. FANNY ENDERS.

CATCH THE ODORS.

Makers of Scents Use Grease to Hold Flower Perfumes.

Every housewife knows—and most boys and girls as well—that butter and milk absorb the scent of any odoriferous substance placed near them. Any one with a keen sense of smelling can easily name the articles that have been in the refrigerator over night with the milk pitcher or butter dish. Both of these foods contain fat, and the readiness with which fats store up odors is a principle that is turned to good use in perfume-making. A flower's scent is a most transitory thing—almost as hard to lay hands upon as the colors of the rainbow. But by bringing this quality of fat into play perfumers manage to capture scents from the most delicate flowers and hold them prisoners for years. In the flower-growing regions of France, where most of the perfumes are made, freshly gathered blossoms are strewn on racks between trays coated with a layer of grease. As the flowers wither and give off their fleeting essences this grease attracts and retains them. When they have shivered and become odorless the fat is collected, packed in tin boxes, and, having become something more than mere grease, given a prettier name—pomade, meaning a "fragrant ointment." In this form the scents of the flower farms are shipped to all corners of the world. It has no very pronounced odor itself—is quite disappointing so far as smell is concerned—but perfumers know how to bring out its hidden treasures. By churning it in spirits the scent is extracted and made into perfume, ready for the handkerchiefs of folks who are probably not aware that if butter and milk could be kept safely with onions the flowers in the French valleys could never be made to furnish a single drop of fragrance for their toilet tables.

Play the King's Rev.

Ever since the assassination of King Humbert hundreds of Chicago Italians have been trying to win prizes in the national lottery by playing the numbers which correspond with the age of the monarch at the time of his death. These numbers are given in mystic codes of the race as fifty-six, ten and forty-nine, the king having lived fifty-six years, ten hours and forty-nine minutes. If these three numbers should win the player would receive 4,250 times the amount of his stake. Some unusually optimistic gamblers have tried to win even more than this by playing a fourth number, seventy-three, which is the symbol of a regicide. If this combination—56, 10, 49 and 73—should win the government at the quarter would have to pay just 60,000 times the amount of the stake.

The last drawing of the national lottery was held in Milan a few days ago and, singularly enough, the winning numbers were 56, 10, 48 and 72. These came pretty close to the mark, and as a result the Italian gamblers are more determined than ever to keep on playing their favorite combination until it brings them good fortune.—Chicago Chronicle.

Scotland's Cities Waking Up.

The question of trolleys or cables is agitating many of the chief cities and towns of Scotland. In Glasgow the new electric cars are working well, and it is expected that the lines will all be completed in time for the opening of the exhibition. Edinburgh sticks to her cable system, while Aberdeen has contracted with an American firm to lay 600 yards of what is called the third rail system as an experiment. In Dundee, where they have the trolleys already, the lines are to be extended to the north and east at an expense of £20,000, while at Portobello, a suburb of Edinburgh, £20,000 is to be expended on cable lines. Paisley has already spent $95,000 on electric lighting, etc.

DEATH GULCH.

Ravine in the Yellowstone Fumes of Which are Fatal.

A ravine in the northeast corner of Yellowstone National park, in Wyoming, is known by those living near by as death gulch. Growsome as is the name, it is exceedingly appropriate. It is a V-shaped trench, cut in the mountain side, and begins about 250 feet above Cache creek. Apparently it forms a natural shelter for the beasts of the forest, as food, water and shelter are there, but entrance to the gulch means death to any animal, for the poisonous vapors that rise out of the ravine are more deadly than the bullets of the hunters.

Some time ago Charles E. George and a Mr. Everett, of Boston, visited the gulch and made an extended examination. They declare the gulch is a death trap which, while different in many ways from the famous Death gulch of Java, is as certain in its effect. At one end the gulch is comparatively open and the wind sweeps through, but at the other, where it forms a ravine, the gases accumulate and asphyxiate all animals that come within the walls of rock. When Mr. George and Mr. Everett entered the gulch the gaseous fumes were so oppressive that they had difficulty in breathing, yet they entered at the end where the gulch is practically open. They lit a wax taper and found that when placed more than forty inches from the ground it was extinguished. This proved the existence of carbon dioxide gas.

The bed of the gulch and ravine was littered with the bones and skins of animals long since dead. They found twenty-three carcasses of bears, one big cinnamon having his nose between his paws, just as if he had fallen asleep.

The two men didn't dare to go into the ravine. What exploration they made resulted in headaches which stayed with them for hours and pains in the throat and lungs which did not subside for a long time.

One of the neatest arrests on record was effected by a policeman near Bourne, Eng., not long ago. Suspecting two men of being deserters, he stepped out behind them and called out sharply: "Attention!" Taken unawares the men sprang to position in true military style, only to find themselves the next moment in the arms of the law.

Agnes Repplier, the essayist, has a remarkable collection of cats, only one of which, a prize Angora, is alive. Tips Driving Away Trade.

It is strange that the hotel and restaurant men do not stamp out the tipping evil in their own interest, says a New York paper. The local patronage is worth a great deal of money to the hotels; yet they are steadily driving it away by permitting the tipping abuse to exist to a shameful extent.

Suppose a bachelor, for instance, must give the waiter at least 10 cents each time, and from that up. Thirty cents a day means $100.50 a year. And it is safe to say that any regular patron of a hotel, if he be what the waiter would call a gentleman will pay in tips at least $200 a year. The same man can enjoy any one of a dozen good places in the city where the dues are 25c a year, and where tipping is absolutely forbidden. Club waiters are paid great salaries and are not allowed to accept gratuities.

Thousands of good people have been driven away from their hotels and restaurants within the past few years and thousands more will soon be coming the hotel and restaurant managers make similar rules to those which prevail in the clubs.

Among the noteworthy bequests for charitable purposes during the past year was that of a Navajo Indian, whose estate, valued at over $20,000, was left for the establishment of a free medical dispensary, as "an aid in extinguishing cruel aboriginal superstitions in the tribe." The giver recognized the fact that, in an important sense, it is for the Indian to say what the future of the Indian shall be.

A $1 bill bearing only a stamp and no wrapper for a written communication on mails from Chicago. The bill served as a wrapper from a written communication on a card, and was sewed to the card. On the outside of the bill was pasted a bit of white paper bearing a two-cent stamp and the address. Question was raised as to the right of sending money in this manner, but the bill in the end was allowed to go on its way.

Berlin, April 2.—A number of versions are in circulation of Emperor William's brief speech in response to the delegation which waited upon him from the Prussian house of lords to tender congratulations upon his escape from serious injury at the hands of Dietrich Weiland. It is asserted that he made the following statement: "During my frequent journeys to and from all parts of the country and my frequent contact with all parts of the population, I have not remained a stranger to what the people think about me." He is also reported to have added: "It is sad that a German workman could have found it in his heart to throw a heavy iron with which he might have killed me."

BEFRIENDED A TRAMP

WHO, ON DYING, LEFT HER HIS SOLE HEIR.

To Her Amusement She Finds Herself in Receipt of a Sum of Ten Thousand Dollars—Good Investment in Kindness.

(Omaha Letter.)

Mrs. Emma Cargill, of Omaha, has entertained an angel unaware. Prompted by sympathy, she gave food and shelter to a supposed tramp the other day, and when, a week later, he died in her house she found herself sole beneficiary of his will, which meant a snug sum in cash—more than she could have made by keeping boarders in ten years.

An oral will is not valid under the Nebraska statutes, but thus far there has been no rival heirs to contest her claim, and the present indications are that she will be in undisputed possession of her windfall.

One evening during the recent cold spell a poor old wanderer, bent under the burden of his years, called at Mrs. Cargill's home and asked for a bed. He was weak and sick, and his voice trembled as he said:

"I have been trying all day to find shelter, and they all turn me away because they think I've got the small-pox."

As there was a peculiar rash on the stranger's face Mrs. Cargill could easily believe this.

"And I am ill," he continued. "God will reward you my good woman."

Having nothing but the stranger's word that his ailment was not small-pox, Mrs. Cargill took him in, gave him a bed on the lounge and such light nourishment as he was able to take. Then he landed her a parcel wrapped in a soiled newspaper and tied with a string. It looked much like a package of old lard.

"Keep this until I get well," he said, "and if I never get well—if I should die—keep it always."

This was the stranger's will.

Placing the package on a window sill the incident, for the time being passed from her mind.

During the next few days the patient spoke but little, but Mrs. Cargill managed to glean from him a few facts. She learned that his name was J. W. Myers, and that he was 76 years old. He had never married. From his brothers and sisters, of whom he had six at the time he left Connecticut, he had not heard in thirty-two years, and he believed they were dead. During his early manhood he had been wild and later had kept much to himself, having lived for the last five years the life of a recluse on his homestead near Lamar, Iowa. When sickness came he converted his property into money and

MRS. EMMA CARGILL started for the city, intending to go to a hospital, but observing that his malady was likely to be mistaken for smallpox he altered his plans. He pleaded the pest house, he said. He wanted to "die like a Christian," so avoided the authorities and made a house-to-house canvass in quest of a good Samaritan, whom he at last found in the person of Mrs. Cargill.

On the seventh day after his arrival at the Cargill home J. W. Myers died. Mrs. Cargill notified the coroner, and while she was gathering his effects preparatory to a removal of the body she chanced upon the greasy package on the window sill.

She tore it open with a languid interest, which soon gave way to a thrill of excitement, for the parcel contained $1,000 in treasury notes—100 $10 bills.

Out of this sum she paid the old man's doctor bills and funeral expenses and the remainder she has deposited in a bank. She says she hopes no heirs will present themselves to claim it, as she wants to use it in the education of her little daughter, 8 years old, who has displayed considerable talent in music.

A BLIZZARD TRAGEDY.

How 28 Deserter from Uncle Sam's Forces Perished in a Dakota Storm. A. E. Town, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., formerly of the west, contributes to the Saturday Globe the following tragic story of the Dakota plains:

"Late in the seventies," says Mr. Town, "when emigration began pouring into Dakota Territory a venturesome pioneer, looking for the choicest land went far beyond the lines of government survey and penetrated into what was later Dickey county. While examining some land with a view of 'squinting' upon it he made a gruesome discovery. In a little swale he found a veritable bone-yard. There were the skeletons of twenty-three horses lying in a small circle and inside this circle there were the bones of twenty-eight men. Scattered on the ground were U. S. buttons and belt buckles. Besides these there were weapons, saddle horns and such things as are usually found in the equipment of a cavalier, nearly eaten up with rust. The rusted weapons, buttons, buckles, etc., precluded the possibility of a massacre as Indians always plundered their victims. The pioneer reported his discovery. Finally army officers heard of it and after investigation the probable explanation was found.

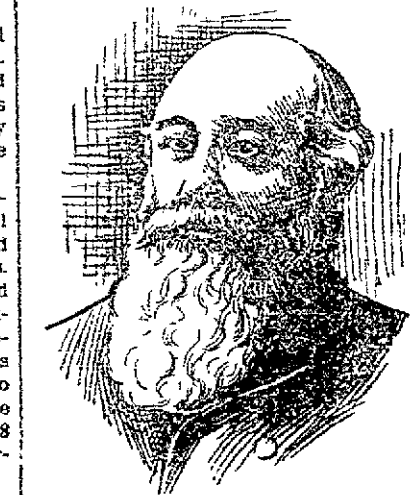

"It seems that in March, 1861, there was a party of cavaliers at Standing Rock, a military post on the Missouri river who sympathized with the Confederacy and as soon as the March thaw had cleared the prairies of snow they deserted. For two or three days strong parties scoured the country in search of them. Finally it was found that the deserters had headed nearly due east, but here pursuit was delayed several days by a terrible blizzard. This left the prairies covered with snow so every trace of them was lost. All search proved futile and was finally abandoned.

The deserters took the shortest route towards civilization, probably because the snow was no longer a hindrance to them. They may have intended to skirt along the frontier and work their way south together, or else to get civilian clothes and then scatter each getting south as best he could.

The spot where the bones were found is nearly 175 miles from Standing Rock, so the fugitives must have made the best time possible after their escape. After the blizzard struck them their only hope would be to reach the James river, where timber and sheltering bluffs could be found, but the Egyptian darkness of a blizzard night must have overtaken them bewildered, blundered with cold, in constant danger of separation, they had, on stumbling on this little swale, taken the last desperate resort of plinthismen when lost in a storm. They scraped out a hole where the snow may have been perhaps three feet deep, then roping and tying down their horses as closely as possible around the hole they got into it and covering themselves with their blankets and scrapings back the snow they waited for the blizzard to bury them deep enough to protect them from the intense cold. But it never did and they finally fell asleep, never to awake. A mile and a half from the river and twenty years afterward a restless land hunter stumbled upon this circle of bones and the mystery of the deserters' fate is solved."

VETERAN EIGHT-HOUR PROMOTER.

One of the originators of the eight-hour movement is George E. McNeil, of Boston. Mr. McNeil is one of the brainiest men who have given their time and voice and pen to the labor cause. He is a veteran in the effort to better the conditions of the working people of this country. At the recent dinner in New York to labor men and social reformers he made a notable address, in which he spoke of his early boyhood, when the poor laboring men of this country were outcasts. He told of the fight for further reductions in the hours of labor and increases in wages, so that the men who own business would be forced to make their workingmen partners among the prominent diners and speakers was Bishop Potter, and later the bishop spoke highly of Mr. McNeil's address.

Distribution of Victoria's Wealth.

It is reported in England that Queen Victoria's will bequeathes $700,000 each to the Duke of Connaught, Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Princess Louise and Princess Beatrice, and includes liberal legacies for the Duchess of Albany and a number of the late queen's grandchildren. The bulk of her private fortune, however, goes to King Edward, and both Balmoral and Osborne Houses are given to the king. Two small houses on the Osborne estate are given to Princess Beatrice.

MOURNING COLORS.

Various Countries Where Black Is Not the Emblem of Sorrow.

Though black is the usual color for mourning, tending to typify the gloom of night "when all men sleep," yet King Edward ordered purple and black for the royal mourning for his mother, and in some nations various (and to us strange) colors are used. The South Sea Islanders wear black and white stripes for mourning, expressive of gloom and hope. In Ethiopia the color for mourning is a grayish brown, signifying "the earth, to which all men shall return" in Syria and Armenia sky blue is worn as mourning for the death of a relative, and is supposed to express the belief that the dead person has gone to heaven in Persian pale green is the color—typical of withered leaves. Purple and violet have been used for mourning for cardinals and for some kings of France. Most people are aware of the fact that the Chinese wear white for their mourning but it is not so well known that white has been used as a color of mourning in England and Scotland. Henry VIII wore white for Anne Boleyn, and Mary Queen of Scots wore white as mourning color after the death of Darnley. As Henry cut off Anne's head, and Mary is supposed to have caused Darnley to be blown up, they may have chosen white as the court mourning for the dead ones with a wink of the eye. But still it was an admitted English color for mourning if any one chose to adopt it. As late as forty years ago in some parts of England it was the custom to wear white hats at the funerals of young people.

"STICK TO IT."

Geo. L. Heard of High Tower Georgia, writes: "Eczema broke out on my baby covering his entire body. Under treatment of our family physician he got worse as he could not sleep for the burning and itching. We used a box of Banner Salve on him and by the time it was gone he was well. The doctor seeing it was curing him said, 'Stick to it for it is doing him more good than anything I have done for him.'"

Arizona's Pine Forests.

Arizona is supposed to be almost an unbroken desert, but in reality it has the largest unbroken pine forest in the United States, covering an area of over 8,000 square miles. This timber is usually found at an altitude of between 5,500 and 7,500 feet. The total quantity of pine timber fit for sawing purposes within the boundaries of the territory amounts to 10,000,000,000 feet, which can supply the needs of a populous state for more than a century.

Leads the World's Exporting Nations.

The great distinction of standing at the head of the world's exporting nations belongs to the United States, proof of this being found in the figures of the calendar year 1900. The total exports of domestic merchandise from the United States in the calendar year 1900 were $1,453,013,659, those from the United Kingdom, which has heretofore led in the race for this distinction, were $1,418,348,000, those from Germany, $1,050,611,000, and from France $787,069,000.

In 1875, the domestic exports of the United States were $497,363,737, those of Germany $607,096,000, those of France $747,489,000, and those of the United Kingdom $1,087,497,000. Today the United States stands at the head of the list, the United Kingdom second, Germany third and France fourth.

A RAGING, ROARING FLOOD.

Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by H. F. Vorkamp. Price 50 cents and $1.00.

THE QUEEN'S DEATH.

WAS ACCURATELY FORETOLD BY A WOMAN.

And All England Is Now Talking of a Mrs. Rathbone of Cheshire—Predicted the Day and Hour and Cause Last August.

(London Letter.)

While the sounds of mourning for the dead queen have not altogether ceased in the land and Britons are slowly and with difficulty learning to say the "King" and anecdote upon anecdote about her late majesty is eagerly discussed, one story goes the rounds considered by some persons the most wonderful of them all. It relates only incidentally to the queen and most directly to a Mrs. Rathbone, a lady residing in Cheshire, who, on August 23, 1900, predicted the very day of the queen's death. Not only did Mrs. Rathbone predict the very date of the queen's death, but foretold the precise malady of which her majesty would expire.

This statement was made in writing on the day named, and read:

"The next great national event will be the death of the queen. This is now very near and I can see her cloud distinctly and the whole nation in mourning. It will not be this year, but early next year, on the 23d of August, and the cause of her death will be paralysis."

Some significance was attached to this statement at the time by reason of Mrs. Rathbone's reputation for clairvoyance, or second sight, which had enabled her on more than one occasion to accurately foretell the most important events in which her family and circle of friends were interested. Mrs. Rathbone is a young woman, whose people are by no means in affluent circumstances but she does not engage in the practice of clairvoyance as a profession.

In the locality where she lives Mrs. Rathbone has thus won considerable repute. Her revelations come to her casually and without prearrangement, and she expressly disclaims all ability to foretell events other than such as are quite unexpectedly revealed to her. In times past she has accurately foretold the date of the death of friends then apparently in robust health and made other predictions all most as remarkable. "I must be bored in mind that when she made her prediction concerning the queen her majesty was, as far as known, in her usual health and bade fair to live many years. In fact, it is the consensus of medical opinion that her death was many years distant."

Mrs. Rathbone suffered considerably when she made her prediction concerning the queen's death, for such a prediction, as might easily be imagined, was by no means popular and was received with much opposition. In fact, the local dogberry, one White, construed the prophecy into a species of treason and was for unceremoniously placing Mrs. Rathbone in jail—and but for this the prediction would never have received the general publicity that thus was accorded it.

Justice White's attempt to punish Mrs. Rathbone was thus the very thing that brought her into notice. The attempt was a failure, of course, there being no law in England against prophecy save the scriptural law that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country. But the ill-advised utterances of the magistrate and his threats against Mrs. Rathbone coming to the notice of Mr. Labouchere, that champion of the poor at once proceeded to make the matter a subject of question in parliament, with the result that Mr. Magistrate White was compelled to return Mrs. Rathbone's memorandum of the prophecy and reconsider his threats of punishment.

Thus having had greatness thrust upon her, as it were, Mrs. Rathbone found herself the object of much and annoying curiosity. The modest cottage in Cheshire in which the Rathbones lived became the Mecca of the curious and the mercenary, and she was besieged with inquiries of every sort, from family affairs to the winning of horse races. Her mail grew to enormous proportions—to such indeed that the little postoffice was unable to handle it and the postman was worked almost to death in his efforts to carry it.

To none of these curious ones did Mrs. Rathbone vouchsafe any information, and in time the siege for information subsided and life resumed its normal trend. Mr. Rathbone, whose occupation as a factor's clerk was threatened by the notoriety thus forced upon him, became, however, very indignant, because the local gentry and others threatened to discontinue their dealings with his employer because of his wife's unpalatable prophecy.

At one time a lawsuit was in which several of the wealthy residents of the district were in danger of being involved, was narrowly averted.

Now that the event has justified Mrs. Rathbone's predictions her fame has been renewed and the volume of her visits and mail has outgrown even its former remarkable proportions. Magistrate White is scarcely able to conceal his chagrin, and some say he is threatened with insanity. The neighborhood defers to Mrs. Rathbone in everything and her husband has been promoted and received an increase of salary.

Mr. Labouchere says he championed Mrs. Rathbone merely to avoid what looked like oppression, though at the time he had not the slightest idea that the prophecy would come true. Its accuracy, he admits, has astounded him as much as it has any one else, and while not a believer in clairvoyance, he confesses his inability to account for this singular occurrence.

In fact, Mr. Labouchere has sent for a record of Mrs. Rathbone's previous prophecies and the dates and circumstances under which they were made, together with a statement of their verification. Public opinion and curiosity is aroused to a great height over the phenomenon. Mrs. Rathbone retains her modest and retiring demeanor, and, as before, absolutely refuses to exercise her remarkable gift for gain. It is reported that the curious affair has been brought to the notice of King Edward who has manifested the liveliest curiosity concerning it.

ERNEST HUTCHINSON.

VICTORIA AND HER SERVANTS.

England's Late Monarch Was Quite Chummy with Her Attendants.

It is perhaps not surprising that the late Queen Victoria was not bothered with the servant girl problem. So great was the rivalry to get into the royal household that its mistress could have her pick of the best the land afforded. Few women, however, no matter what their station so won the affections of her servants. She was 51 years old and walked with difficulty when one of her housemaids fell ill at Windsor castle and was confined to her bed in a room which was high up in the building and could only be approached by several flights of stairs. One of the canons of Windsor paid her a visit and remarked upon the invalid's peculiarly radiant expression, and also made a half jocular allusion, as to the altitude of her bedroom. "I am very happy, sir," said the housemaid, "today the queen herself has been to see me. Her majesty came into this room and sat down by me. Then she said 'I have got away from them all and come to see you. Do you know how I did it? I managed it by sitting down on every third stair.'"

With an old housekeeper at Windsor, who was a Methodist she would bring her knitting and sit an hour at a time talking on questions of the deepest moment to them both. She was perplexed at the old lady's idiosyncrasy, and especially vexed to find that she meant when she spoke of "conversion" the housekeeper was only a good woman and no theologian at all in the phrases of the school, and so she fell back on a relation of hers who was a minister in New York, and from him obtained a book or two which might enlighten her royal mistress.

DEATHS OF LAST YEAR.

War, famine and pestilence made a fearful record.

War, famine and pestilence have done their share, and perhaps more, the past year in reducing the population of the world, says the Chicago Tribune. During 1899 the principal military operations were confined to the Philippine Islands, the Sudan and South Africa, and the losses in killed and wounded from these and scattering sources were 18,161. Last year the principal operations were in the Philippine Islands, South Africa, China and Colombia, and from these the returns of killed and wounded are as follows: China, 90,913, South Africa, 24,003, Philippines, 6,621, and Colombia, 5,070. The returns from China represent not only the results of collisions between the Chinese and the allies, but also the dreadful massacres which preceded and followed the outbreak in various parts of the empire. Adding to the above the totals from other parts of Asia and Africa, and from Mexico, Venezuela, Bulgaria and Morocco, the total is 133,753, as compared with 49,161 in 1899. Epidemic diseases were not so destructive of life as in 1899. The returns for plague are but 20,907, a decrease of 230,000, while cholera deaths are put at 60,000, an increase of 58,000. No accurate estimate has been made of the number of victims of the Indian famine. The official reports, so far as known, foot up 500,000, but the actual number probably greatly exceeds this.

William's Idea of a Monarch.

Not long ago an American professor attended a reception in the royal palace given by the Kaiser to an associate of scientists, at which William appeared in the gorgeous robes of royalty preceded by liveried chamberlains bearing the crown and insignia. It was a most impressive display, and when the professor came away he said to a friend: "I am a republican to the backbone, but I believe that if monarchs are necessary they should be monarchs to the last bit of gold lace, just as William is Kaiser." The next day this friend had an audience with the Kaiser, and in the course of the conversation told him what the American professor had said. "That is exactly what I believe," he said. "Dom Pedro of Brazil illustrated the folly of trying to be a republican on a throne."

RIDGELEY, THE LATEST FREAK.

He Hails from Kansas and Springs Fool Nations in Congress.

Kansas, whence came the bewick-ered Peffer and the sockless Simpson, must now make a place in its gallery of freaks for another eccentric individual. His name is Ridgeley and he is a Populist representative in congress.
Ridgeley sprang into fame recently by introducing a measure which he declares is "to regulate commerce and industry." It purports that each state shall be represented in the cabinet, fixes the rates of railroads at not exceeding one mill per mile and says telegraphing shall cost not more than one cent for every three words. The hours of study in school shall not exceed three each day and all kinds of punishment are prohibited. Every citizen who fails to vote at an election shall be prosecuted. The secretary of public fisheries is to catch and cure fresh and salt fish to supply people in all parts of the country with the inhabitants of the deep. A secretary of laundries is to see to it that the water in all tubs will be changed with each new lot of clothing. There are also to be departments of public periodicals, amusements, fairs, lectures, comfort, hotels and baths.

Perhaps Ridgeley thinks he is funny, but such ideas might be more naturally expected to originate in an insane asylum than in the serious house of representatives.

Bull fighting, Spain's national sport, was supposed to be too strongly entrenched in the spirit and traditions of the people ever to become distasteful to them, but it now appears destined to be swept away before the march of civilization. At a recent mass-meeting in Barcelona, the scene of many a gory contest between matador and bull, resolutions were passed condemning the sport as cruel and brutalizing, and calling upon the government to suppress it throughout the peninsula.
The fact attests the power of the humanizing ideas and influences which, slowly, but surely, are transforming the world into a better and happier abiding place for man and animal alike.

by an inflamed condition of the mucous tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out

American Exports to Argentine.
It is with considerable envy that the German papers state that during the last year the exports from the United States to the Argentine Republic have increased 39 per cent as compared with the figures of the preceding year. This gives America the second place among the countries which do an import business into Argentina, while the German empire has been pressed down to the fourth place. To such an extent has German prestige lost ground in the La Plata republic that even Italy ranks above Germany. England is still holding the first place, but there is no doubt in the minds of the German exporters that American energy will not permit the British to enjoy this privilege much longer.—Wolfgang Voigt,

ROMANCE OF THE SEA

WITH A CREW OF GENTLEMAN-

Peccol Experience of a Ship's Crew in Straightened Circumstances on the South American Coast—The Bad Men Had Escaped from Cayenne.

(Special Letter.)

It was a queer chapter of accidents that overtook the bark Nonesuch on the South American coast. We were bound from Philadelphia to Pernambuco, being a well-found craft and a willing crew, and we lost a man overboard before we had been out twenty-four hours. Off the Bahamas the second mate and two men pulled away in the dingy to inspect some wreckage which seemed to prove the loss of a steamer, and as they were returning a small whale rose under the boat and smashed her to match wood and then three sailors were drowned. This left us three men short, and we put in at the Windward Islands to replace them.
After much trouble we got two men, but as we were leaving port the captain was bitten on the cheek and the first mate on the hand by a flying insect, somewhat resembling the so-called "darning needles" to be found in the United States. Within an hour they were suffering as much as if they had been stung by an asp.

A Luckless Voyage.

The captain's wife was aboard, and of course she did all in her power, but it was three or four days before the men could move about again, and then only the mate could return to duty.
The captain had what seemed to be a carbuncle appear under his right eye and for ten days he suffered so acutely that at times he was out of his senses.
We should have run into Demerara had he not begun to improve, but it would have been better had we done so anyhow. The two fellows we picked up at the Windward Islands proved to be worthless sailors and bad men, and they worked the bark an evil turn.
One night as we lay becalmed, with the captain and mate still suffering from the poisonous bites, they overpowered and bound the second mate, provisioned and lowered a boat and embarked four of the original crew to embark with them. We afterward came to know that they had been talking a great deal about a treasure buried on the Dutch Guiana coast, from which we were distant about 75 miles. We were thus left with only three able hands aboard, and the captain's wife had to take her trick at the wheel while we headed for Cayenne to get relief. We had crawled along to within thirty miles of the French penal port when the wind headed us, and we could do no better than drift off to the eastward and wait for a change.

Convicts on a Raft.

After about thirty hours of drifting the wind changed in our favor, and one morning at sunrise we were making shift to get on our course again, when we espied a raft with twelve men on it close at hand. With the naked eye one could make out that they were clothed in convict garb, and of course the deduction was that they had es-

HIS WIFE AT THE WHEEL.

escaped from the coast. There were two rude sails on the raft, and the clumsy structure had had a fair breeze behind her for a day and a half. As the raft was not easily managed we could have easily done it by putting up our helm. We were for doing this at once, all but the captain's wife. She knew they were convicts and desperate men and that once aboard of us we should be at their mercy, but she nevertheless insisted that we should pick them up.
They were 50 miles off the coast, with the signs of a storm coming on, and she declared that it would be a cruel act to leave them to perish. I was of a mind to look her up in her state room and dodge the raft, but the other two men were against me, and ten minutes later the boat was alongside and the convicts were climbing aboard.
I expected nothing less than an immediate attack from them, for twelve tougher looking men I never set eyes on, but, to my surprise, they halted at the rail while their leader advanced, doiled his cap, with a scrape of his foot and in passable English inquired for the captain. He was told of the captain's illness and of our being short-handed, and he bowed and scraped again and said to the woman:

"Madame, have no fears. You probably know that we are escaped convicts from Cayenne, but no man will offer harm to any one aboard. We may be robbers and murderers, but we are also gentlemen in a way. There is bad weather coming on. We have arrived at an opportune moment. Most of us are sailors, and all of us are at your orders."

Captain III at Ease.

When I looked into their vicious faces, I could not help but suspect that they had a game to play and were only delaying it, but it was policy to take them at their word. As soon as the captain and mate heard of the arrival of the gang they became almost panic stricken and advised this and that, and the wife was the only one who had the least confidence in the promises made.

It was well that she had and that her advice to trust them was followed by all of us. We could not have kept them from coming aboard with our feeble crew, and to have shown our mistrust afterward would have angered them. They took hold with us at once after being given food, and before night we had cause to rejoice that they were with us. We got dirty weather which lasted three days, and but for their aid the Nonesuch would have become a helpless wreck or gone to the bottom. We had to run off to the east during this spell, and it was only when the weather cleared that the leader of the convicts had a conference with the captain and his wife and asked that the gang be set ashore in Brazilian territory. This was promised him and I must say that I never worked with a more cheerful and willing crew aboard of any craft. Seven of the twelve had been convicted of murder, and all were desperate men, but they were as obedient as children and as good natured as you please.
They were careful of their language, respectful in their demeanor, and not up and that river for forty miles to set them ashore. In his gratitude to them the captain gave them selcheth for two tents, a musket, a lot of clothes from the ship chest and all the provisions we could spare. With cooking utensils, fish hooks, and a few carpenters' tools they were fairly well-rigged out for a life on the banks of the stream for half a year to come, and at parting there were as much hand-shakings and as many farewells as if a band of old friends were breaking up. Their escape from the colony was a desperate one, and the authorities made an exhaustive search, but as far as I am able to learn, not one of the dozen has ever been taken.

FINE FOR A LAUGH.

A Serious Thing to Giggle in Church in 1800.

Mrs. Boda Button of New Haven, who lived beyond the century mark, used to tell many amusing old-time anecdotes to her friends. One of them seems to prove that a hundred years ago a laugh might have been a serious affair. In 1800, when she was a young girl, she attended church one Sunday with a friend of her own age. Now, of course, it is not proper to giggle in church or to whisper unnecessarily; but girls will be girls. During the singing of a hymn she observed something funny going on in another pew, where there was a number of lively children whose sense of the impropriety of outward decorum could not prevent them from indulging in pranks on the sly. She called her friend's attention to it in a whisper which was in itself comically worded; and the friend, taken by surprise, laughed out loud, and then, overcome by confusion, sat down, blushing violently. In her embarrassment she did not notice a ripe peach which lay on the seat; she sat on it, and a general titter ran from pew to pew at her expense. The next morning Mrs. Button was summoned before a magistrate, formally and seriously reprimanded for creating an unseemly disturbance in church and fined ten shillings. She was a merry body, even at a hundred years of age.
"But," she would say, "since that day I have always been solemn as the minister himself in church, you may be sure!"

Bicycles in Siam.

The first consignment of safety bicycles was brought to Bangkok by Dr.
P. T. Carrington, an American dentist.
In 1896. Previous to that time one or two of these wheels had been imported for private use. There are now in this city between 2,500 and 3,000 bicycles. They are to be seen in all parts of the city and are used by all classes.
The King of Siam rides an American bicycle of the latest and most improved model, and it is by no means an uncommon thing to see the ministers of the government coming and going to their duties and even to public functions on their wheels. The minister of the interior has systematically encouraged the use of the wheel, believing that its employment will lead to better roads in the city and in the country towns. He is the head of a large bicycle club that numbers upward of 400 members. Among the members are many of the princes and government officials, and, in the favorable seasons of the year, this club indulges in long runs to the remote parts of the city. These runs are generally held during the cooler portion of the night, and wind up in a banquet well toward the morning.—From United States Consul-General King's Official Report.

Plant Blows Away Dust.

A singular plant is "the coughing bean," known to botanists as the Echidnaceae. It is a native of warm and moist tropical countries and cannor and will not stand dust. When dust settles upon the breathing pores in the leaves of this plant and chokes them a gas accumulates inside the leaves and when it gains sufficient strength forcibly "blows off," clearing the pores of dust and making a sound exactly like coughing. At the same time the leaves tremble and the plant actually "gets red in the face," through the sinking of the green chlorophyll grains and the appearance of red portions on the leaves. This plant is sometimes used as a house plant, and sweeping the rooms set it coughing, to the intense astonishment of persons not familiar with its peculiarities.

Old Business Proves Success.

One young man in New York in preparing himself to enter college has been forced into an odd business. Finding himself free to face with the necessity of earning a living while he went on with his studies, he obtained employment for two hours a day as a waiter. This earned him his meals, says the Herald, but he had to cast about for clothes and lodging.

It occurred to him to ask some of his acquaintances to give him the commission of doing their washing. Of course, he had neither time nor skill to do the actual work of washing and ironing himself, but he found others to do this and merely undertook as middleman to collect and deliver the clothing, taking a moderate commission for his part of the work.

He pleased his customers so well that they recommended him to their friends, and his business grew so that he had to hire a room and maintain there a clerk to attend to the details of orders and the like. He continues to do the actual delivering himself, using for the purpose a bicycle.

His business gives him a fair living, and it looks as if he might extend it.
He is perhaps the only laundry broker in town.

Russia's Many Waterways.

No other country is so prodigally endowed with navigable rivers as Russia. The rivers of Russia have their sources within a comparatively few miles of each other, all of the great streams arising within the area of the broad plateau of the north, so that it was no difficult feat to connect the headwaters of the numerous rivers.

The construction of less than 400 miles of actual canals made it possible to travel by barge from Archangel, on the Arctic, to Astrakhan on the Caspian, a distance of more than 3,000 miles, from St. Petersburg to the foot of the Urals, and from the Baltic to the Black sea by three distinct routes, to say nothing of Moscow and numerous other inland cities which were brought into direct water communication with all parts of the empire.

The Republicans helped to defeat both Richmond and Davis, but the ward heeled would like to keep that fact under cover, if possible.

Then who defeated Byrd for assessor in the sixth? Here was another throw down on account of race that is sufficiently plain to cause an open protest on the part of the colored voters of Lima, and they were not slow in showing their displeasure last night after it was seen that their man had been counted out. The Republican leaders were applying salve with a white wash and in several wards heavier. Hundreds who attended the primaries to

CONTEMPT

Case Engages Attention of the Court Today.

Assistant Attorney General Todd of Columbus

Represents the State in the Action Against J. H. Spittler, of the Home Co-Operative Union of Lima.

A case of considerable local interest is engaging the attention of ex-Circuit Court Judge J. J. Moore, of Ottawa in the common pleas room today. The defendant is J. H. Spittler, of the Home Co-Operative Union, from whom the trustees, C. D. Crites and S. S. Wheeler, who were appointed by the court, seek to recover the sum of $863.57.

The April term of the common pleas court begins Monday and on that day the grand jury will convene to take up such criminal matters as have been called to the attention of the prosecuting attorney since the last term. There are but a few such cases and none of especial importance, so far as the public is aware, except the charge of murder preferred against Clem Dickman, who stabbed Jack Carroll to death.

Dickman, as has been recorded, was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $1,000, and yesterday his friends succeeded in furnishing the required security, thus giving him his liberty at least until after the result of the grand jury's investigation is made known. If he is held for trial by their decision a new bond will be required, the amount being fixed by the common pleas judge.

The civil docket is the smallest for years, showing that the determination of Judge Gunningham to get rid of cases long pending has had the effect of cleaning out many of the state ones. The docket will be called Monday and cases assigned as usual, and the following week the petit jury will take up its burden.

Spittler had been ordered by the Supreme Court to turn over this money to the trustees, and in failing to do so an action for contempt of court was begun against him, and a United States marshal recently came here from Columbus to serve Mr. Spittler with the necessary papers.

His defense is that the portion of the amount he seeks to withhold stands for sums that had not been paid to him by members of the association and in part salary that is due him. Judge Price is looking after his interests while Assistant Attorney General Todd represents the state. A supreme court stenographer was also brought to Lima to make up the record of the case.

ONE OF THE MANY.

Mrs. Abbie Swintaman, of Delphos, seeks a divorce from Marion Swintaman on the grounds of cruelty, and adds that he is an habitual drunkard. Her petition states that he threatened to shoot her and he has frequently struck her with his fist and otherwise abused her. They were married December 14, 1888, and have one child. Her maiden name was Mouser and she wants it restored to her.

MIND HAS GIVEN WAY.

Nellie Clark, 31 years of age, was adjudged insane yesterday and will be sent to the Toledo asylum. The woman's father committed suicide and last Saturday she placed a butcher knife at the throat of Mrs. Cavanaugh of the hotel by that name, remarking that it would be a good chance to cut her throat as her father had done some years before. She is of a melancholic disposition and considered dangerous.
